BIG GAME ISSUE!

Cal It's coming! Saturday, November 19th!
Time to get back the Axe! Are you ready?

Some of the best moments in the Cal-StanfUrd Rivalry:

1939 Bowles Men paint blue and gold "C"s on buildings in the Stanford Quadrangle. Fifteen carloads of Stanford students attack the Big "C" but are repelled by Cal student guards.

1942 One hundred twenty layers of paint are scraped off of the Big "C". Eighty layers are gold, and forty are red.

1960s Stanford students awake one morning to find large, blue footprints scaling up the outside of Hoover Tower. When Stanford officials order that the prints "must come down immediately," their wish comes true when – two days later – the large, blue footprints descend the other side of the tower.

1960s Cal students use large quantities of rock salt to burn a "C" into the lawn on the Stanford Quad. The nighttime lawn sprinklers melt the salt, which leaches into the soil, leaving a gold "C" on the lawn for weeks. (Stanford has to dig up the entire lawn and bring in new topsoil and sod.)

1977 Cal bandmen carve a replica of the Axe in meticulous detail. During halftime of the Cal-Stanford basketball game, they run across the Maples Pavillion court waving the "Axe" and taunting the Stanford fans. Several Stanford students give chase but to no avail. Shortly thereafter the getaway car carrying the "Axe" is stopped for speeding, but the police let the students go when they show that the object is a fake. In appreciation of the successful hoax, the Stanford Band sends the Cal Band a case of champagne.

1982 The Play. (If you don't know what this is, please educate yourself.)
